REVIEW

For the half year ended 30 June 2026, the Fund returned -6.7%, against the benchmark which returned -6.4% in SGD terms.

The first half of 2026 was marked by a sharp divergence between onshore and offshore Chinese markets, even as the macro backdrop remained uneven. Onshore A-shares were supported by strong Artificial Intelligence (AI)-related trading activity and a powerful rotation into technology and industrial supply chains, while Hong Kong-listed Chinese equities came under sustained pressure from the United States (US)-Iran war, weak domestic demand, and a more bifurcated earnings environment. Beijing's 2026 growth target of 4.5-5% signaled a lower but more sustainable policy ambition, and the economy delivered a brief upside surprise in the first quarter before slowing again in the second. Retail sales weakened materially, fixed investment softened, and the recovery remained heavily reliant on exports and policy support.

Inflation dynamics were similarly mixed. China moved out of its long producer-price deflation cycle, but the improvement was driven more by energy costs and AI-related industrial demand than by a broad-based domestic demand recovery. The yuan strengthened against the US dollar through most of the period, supported by improving capital flows, stronger AI-linked exports, and greater tolerance for currency firmness. At the same time, government bond yields compressed to historic lows as the market priced a more accommodative policy stance. Against this backdrop, the People's Bank of China (PBoC) continued to manage liquidity carefully, while the trade truce with Washington and the Trump-Xi summit offered some relief, though geopolitical and trade uncertainties remained elevated.

From a market perspective, AI remained the dominant thematic driver across the region. Semiconductor, data centre, and related infrastructure names outperformed sharply, outperforming more cyclical and consumer-facing segments by a wide margin. However, the rally was increasingly concentrated, and broader sentiment remained pressured by weaker earnings visibility, persistent property-sector stress, and renewed concerns over external demand. Looking into the second half, the key question is whether policy support, AI investment, and trade stability can offset still-fragile household demand and renewed external headwinds.

In CNH terms, Information Technology (+35.5%) was the best performing sector, followed by Real Estate (+9.8%). On the other hand, Consumer Discretionary (-28.6%) and Communication Services (-25.3%) were the worst performing sectors.

Zhongji Innolight Co Ltd (+133.1%), NAURA Technology Group Co Ltd (+92.7%), and Cambricon Technologies Corp Ltd (+68.1%) contributed positively to performance, while Xiaomi Corp (-45.0%), Great Wall Motor Co Ltd (-40.6%), and Shanxi Xinghuachun Fen Wine Factory Co Ltd (-36.8%) detracted.

STRATEGY AND OUTLOOK

The Fund continues to replicate as closely as possible, before expenses, the performance of the Hang Seng Stock Connect China 80 Index.

As of 8 July 2026
