U.S. Grocery Stores¹
(Monthly % change y-o-y)

- U.S. retail sales rose significantly more than expected in May, increasing 6.9% y-o-y and 0.9% from the previous month²
- Core retail sales, which exclude automobiles, gasoline, building materials, and food services, rose 0.7% in May, following a 0.5% increase in April, underscoring the resilience of U.S. consumer spending despite ongoing economic uncertainties²
- The FOMC voted unanimously to keep its benchmark overnight borrowing rate unchanged, anchored in a range of 3.5%-3.75% in its June 2026 meeting. Inflation remains elevated relative to the Committee's 2 percent goal, in part reflecting supply shocks that have driven price increases in certain sectors, including energy³

Favourable Outlook for Grocery-Anchored Strip Centers

Resilient Foot Traffic Underscores Strip Center Strength

Foot traffic at strip centers has remained resilient despite sentiment surveys pointing to a deeply cautious consumer. First quarter traffic is up 5% relative to 2019 and 3% versus 2025, representing the strongest trends across retail formats

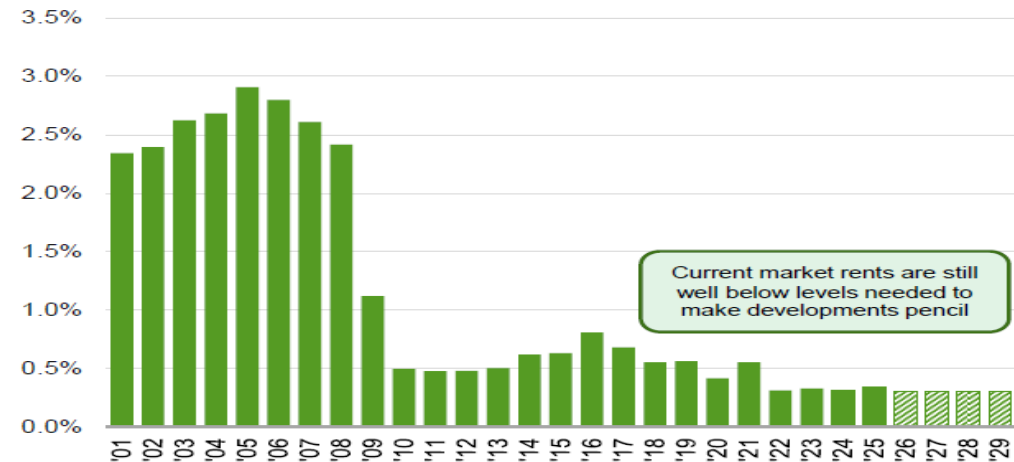

New Supply to Remain Muted Despite Resilient Demand

New strip center developments are expected to remain limited, with market supply growth forecast to hold steady at approximately 0.3% annually over the next four years. Despite considerably stronger retailer demand for space in recent years, development economics remain challenging, keeping new supply scarce

1Q 2026 Financial Results

10% Year-on-Year Growth in Distributable Income

- Gross revenue and net property income increased by 8.7% and 12.7%, respectively. This was driven by the commencement of new leases, built-in rental escalations in existing leases, and the contribution from Dover Marketplace and Wallingford Fair Shopping Center, which were acquired in August 2025 and January 2026 respectively
- Finance costs were higher due to additional borrowings taken to fund these acquisitions, partially offset by lower interest rates on the floating rate loans
- Overall, distributable income was higher by 10% year-on-year

The Storefront Advantage in a Digital World

Brick-and-Mortar Stores Continue to Anchor Grocery Performance

While grocers have expanded online fulfillment since the pandemic, most recent sales growth continues to come from physical stores. According to Placer.ai, grocery foot traffic rose across all formats last year. Fresh-format grocers like Whole Foods Market and Sprouts Farmers Market saw the strongest gains, driven by consumers opting to dine at home. Value grocers including Trader Joe's, Aldi and Lidl also recorded higher visits, reflecting demand for affordable options. Notably, growth in store visits has been led by lower- and middle-income consumers, rather than higher-income segments¹

Grocers Expand Footprint to Capture Rising Demand

Many retailers are leveraging their stores as fulfillment centers for curbside and in-store pickup of online orders. Capital One reports that 85% of its customers who buy online and pick up in store (“BOPIS”) tend to make an additional purchase within the store itself. These BOPIS shoppers consistently show higher order values and stronger repeat behavior, driving reliable repeat store traffic¹
