OUR JOURNEY SINCE OCT 2014 .. AND MOVING FORWARD

Overview of Asian Financial System: Asia to Dominate International Financial Markets by 2050

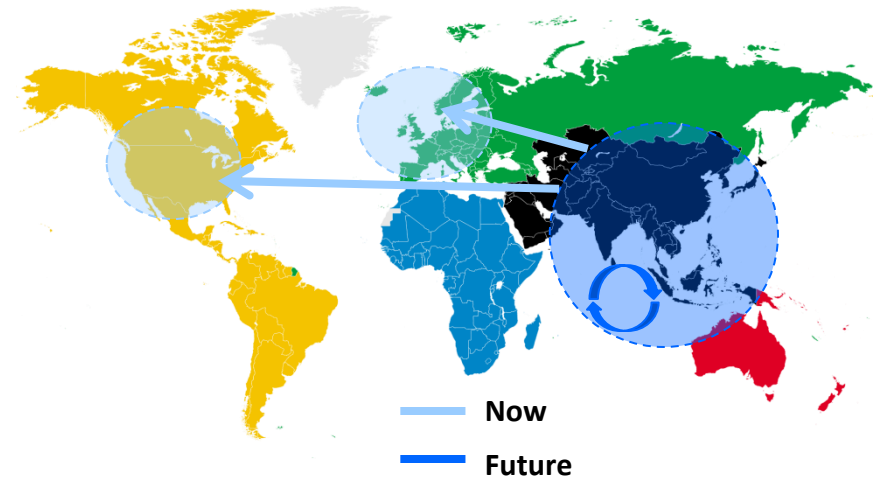

Asian GDP will be larger than the US and Europe combined by 2030 and represent over half of global economy by 2050.

Asian equity markets will represent c.42% of global market capitalisation by 2030, and 72% by 2050.

Asia will be home to many global financial centres (Shanghai, Seoul, Singapore, Hong Kong), rivalling New York and London.

Asian capital flows will increasingly remain within the region, while US and Europe are likely to receive a smaller share in the future.

1. RoW: Rest of the World

Key Trends are Reshaping Banking and Presenting Opportunities

Customer segment specialisation

Customers' buying behaviour rapidly shifting to banks who can provide solutions (rather than products) and service cross-border needs

Trade/FDI¹/Wealth Flows

Trade is increasingly driven by intra-Asia flows. Banks have to service their clients in their main trade corridors

Regulations driving business changes

Plain-vanilla lending rapidly becoming less profitable on a risk-adjusted basis, due to higher costs of capital and operational expenses

Huge rise in assets and shift in investor base

The expansion and emergence of institutional investors (for e.g., sovereign wealth funds and real money funds), with diverse investment mandates and investment goals
