IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Sheffield Green Rebrands Global Training Division as Trainergy

- Wind Asia Training and Stier Training Services are now consolidated under the Trainergy brand
- Training services cover Renewables, Oil and Gas, Maritime, Construction, and multi-industrial operations
- Training programs are approved by premier international bodies including GWO, OPITO, and STCW
- The offering extends beyond technical skills to include competency management, bespoke course development, and nationalisation programmes

Singapore, 21 April 2026 – Sheffield Green Ltd. (SGX: SGR) (“Sheffield Green”, the “Company”, or together with its subsidiaries, the “Group”), a leading human resource services provider for the renewable energy industry, wishes to announce the official rebranding of its training subsidiary, formerly known as Wind Asia Training and Stier Training Services, to Trainergy. This strategic evolution consolidates the group’s training capabilities under a single, unified brand designed to meet the growing demand for highly skilled labour in the global energy transition.

A Unified Vision for High-Hazard Training

The transition to Trainergy marks a significant milestone in the Group's expansion beyond its initial focus on wind energy in Asia. While maintaining its roots in renewables, Trainergy provides essential training and competency services across multiple safety-critical sectors. This includes comprehensive support for offshore and onshore wind projects, oil and gas operations, maritime services, and construction, as well as broader multi-industrial operations.

Global Reach, Local Relevance

Trainergy currently operates established training facilities in Taiwan and Spain. The Taiwan centre is located in Chiayi, while the Spanish centre is based in Gran Canaria. These sites provide dependable capacity to deliver global-standard training consistently, even as industry demands evolve. The facilities are accredited by leading international bodies, including the Global Wind Organisation ("GWO"), Offshore Petroleum Industry Training Organisation ("OPITO"), and Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers ("STCW").

The rebranding reflects Trainergy's unique "local relevance" approach to instruction. By utilising locally experienced instructors and industry-specific examples, the company improves knowledge retention and practical on-the-job application for all delegates.

Expanded Service Offering

Beyond technical training, Trainergy offers a comprehensive suite of consultative services to support safety-critical organisations. The company's competency management services help organisations assess and track workforce skills to ensure they meet operational standards. Furthermore, Trainergy provides bespoke course development to deliver custom-built training solutions tailored to specific operational challenges. To support national workforce goals, the Group implements upskilling and nationalisation programmes designed to build local capability through targeted development. Additionally, Trainergy offers end-to-end training management services, handling all logistics from scheduling to compliance tracking to reduce administrative complexity for clients.

Chief Executive Officer of Sheffield Green, Mr Kee Boo Chye commented: "Our transition to the Trainergy brand marks a pivotal step in Sheffield Green's growth strategy, reflecting our commitment to staying ahead of the curve in an evolving industrial landscape. By unifying our training centres in Taiwan and Spain under one global identity, we are providing our clients with a consistent, international standard of excellence that ensures their workforce is safe, compliant, and operationally ready to power the energy transition."
