Brent oil prices began in September at $61 per barrel and increased to $68 per barrel after the attacks on major Saudi Arabian oil infrastructures which disrupted the country's crude oil production. During October then Brent oil price fell to $58 per barrel as concerns over oil demand and the ongoing state of the global economy increased.

According to Bloomberg the industry has been burdened in 2019 by weakening demand amid a "synchronized slowdown", which has pressured producers and forced major players to adopt supply-cutting policies. It appears that production cuts have not been able to override the downward trend of oil pricing. One of the biggest headwinds to global growth and upside movement in crude oil prices is the US-China trade war. Efforts towards reaching a meaningful trade arrangement continues to be difficult between the two countries. China has also expressed its doubt over the possibility of arranging a long-term trade deal with the US.

Non-OPEC supply growth is expected to be supported by start-ups of several fields in 2020, including Norway's Johan Sverdrup as well as assets in Lula, Lapa, Lara and the Buzios fields in Brazil. However, factors such as the drive for capex discipline, geopolitical tensions, unplanned outages, extended field maintenance, delays in infrastructure debottlenecking, as well as oil price developments will remain the key uncertainties affecting supply growth.

According to Rystad Energy, lower oil prices will push the global service market into a recession in 2020. In 2020, if Brent oil prices are $60 per barrel, service market growth will fall to $621 billion, down from $647 billion in 2019.

In analysing market segments, Rystad contends that the Shale segment will likely drag down oilfield services purchases as it contracts by six percent in 2020. The offshore segment will decline by one percent as oil companies cut brownfield and exploration activity to curb spending and onshore activity will see revenues drop by five percent as OPEC scales back investments.

However, due to the existing backlog, some service segments can still realize positive revenue growth. Subsea equipment, SURF (subsea umbilical's, risers, and flowlines) and offshore drilling can still accelerate in 2020, but growth will fall from the double-digits to the single-digits. Despite near-term declines, Rystad anticipates a positive outlook for the global oilfield services sector beyond 2020.

There remains to be highly competitive pricing landscape for Mermaid within its DSV IRM and ROV segments. Mermaid continues to adjust its capabilities in offering a wider range of integrated subsea services and increasing its fleet capability by venturing into new markets in the Mediterranean, Gulf of Suez, Red Sea and North Sea.

Whilst we continue to focus on our core business lines, we are continuing to pursue contracts further afield that is driving the company into a new era of subsea Installation engineering, offshore decommissioning, project & offshore construction management, cable and SURF installation.

Cash preservation remains a top priority for the Group. The Company continued to execute its cost savings program to counter the impact of the market challenging whilst aiming to maintain safety, quality and efficiency.

In our drilling business joint venture under Asia Offshore Drilling Limited ("AOD"), the Group's three high specification jack-up drilling rigs have performed optimally in the Middle East with near full utilization during the third quarter of 2019. All three rigs have been working for the same customer in the same location since 2013 and have had their contracts continually renewed on a back-to-back basis to date.

The current status is that 'AOD I' is on contract through to June 2022, 'AOD II' is on contract through to April 2020 and 'AOD III' on contract through to December 2019. The jack-up market remains a challenging one and competition remains fierce. During this time, AOD's focus shall continue to be on retaining gainful employment for all three rigs with its existing customer into the long term and to operate all rigs at optimal levels.
