ampaign promises during the 2017 gubernatorial election.

The apartment units are aimed t tenants who have an income f Rp 4 million (US$272) to Rp 7 nillion per month and married ouples have priority.

Jakarta Housing Agency has eported that 2,482 people have igned up for the Samawa pro-ram, and the first 780 prospec-ive tenants will be short listed fter the agency verifies the doc-ments submitted with relevant gencies, such as the population nd civil registry agency, as well s tax agencies.

Dzikran said registration ould reopen for the program ometime next month even ough the number of applicants as already higher than the unit vailability.

"We will open registration rough a website where appli-ants can update their informa-on anytime. We are preparing e mechanism to learn about the umber of Jakartans who need ousing. In that way the private ector can see how interesting is sector is," he said.

ve heat and cold temperatures the houses," Farid said, adding at the material used for the in-lator was a "secret".

Anies confirmed on Wednes-y that he had seen the design.

"The design is great since it's t only artistic but also opens onomic opportunity for its res-ents. We will discuss it in our DTR [revision] so we can decide w to realize it," Anies said.

Besides the RDTR revision, nies also plans to disburse de-lopment funds, under the Com-unity Action Plan, directly to ople living in at least 21 kam-ngs to whom Anies has pledged litical contracts. The plan, wever, raises questions about e accountability of the fund.

Urbanist from Trisakti Univer-y Nirwono Joga said that de-ite the new design, Kampung uarium was still a green zone, d the Jakarta administration ould not allow any develop-ent in the area.

"Whatever the form, it is illegal build container houses or any-ing else in the [green] area. The ministration must uphold the gulation and not support illegal velopment," Nirwono said.

Similarly, city councilor Pantas Nainggolan questioned the administration's inconsistency with the spatial planning.

Anies, he said, should adhere to the spatial planning for development in the capital rather than accommodate his political interests. "Anies can't arbitrarily propose a revision for existing regulations," he said.

Wicaksono Sarosa of the Partnership of Sustainable Urban Development (Kemitraan-Habitat), however, said an issue more crucial than spatial planning was the budget, because container housing would require special material to cope with heat inside the houses.

"This is possible, theoretically, but we have to see how to deal with the heat because it is impossible to give them air conditioners. It can be solved but what is the material and how much will it cost?" Wicaksono said. (ggq)
