The construction and engineering services provider was named "Company of the Year" at the SEA Business Awards – which recognizes outstanding company performance across all aspects of business operations in Australia – in Perth recently.

The Subsea Energy Australia panel said: "Civmec's financial performance over the last four years demonstrates a company with vision, enthusiasm and drive. Civmec scored well in all award categories and adhered to industry best practices. SEA is pleased to recognise this homegrown excellence through the 'Company of the Year' award."

Civmec received the award in recognition of its internally developed enterprise resource planning platform, Civtrac, which utilises bar codes and real-time analysis to track materials from start to finish. Civtrac improves planning and resource allocation while reducing labour and material waste.

Mr. Tim Charlton, editor-in-chief and publisher of Singapore Business Review, said: "This is a night of winners as we celebrate groundbreaking projects and trailblazing innovations from Singapore's most outstanding firms."

Mr. Patrick Tallon, CEO of Civmec, said: "We are delighted to receive recognition for the Civmec team's hard work. We will continue to develop Civmec's business across various sectors and diversify income streams to enhance our client offerings, while staying future-ready for upcoming market opportunities in the region."
